

TOUGHING IT OUT: STRATEGIES FOR MANAGING WORKPLACE CONFLICT

Course Code: TIO

Managing conflict in the workplace can be time consuming and costly, not to mention the additional stress and friction that tends to result. This programme is aimed at HR professionals and managers with HR responsibilities who need to steer a course of action to resolve the conflict, and at the same time minimise the employer's legal risk and exposure.

This half day training session will give participants the opportunity to workshop and develop practical strategies on how to manage difficult and time consuming employee disputes and litigation. It will build personal resilience to manage complex and protracted disputes as well as dealing with third party service providers such as lawyers and managing staff during such a process. It will also build awareness of the relevant legal issues when an employee dispute becomes litigious. This session will provide the opportunity to network and discuss the issues with peers from different organisations.

Learning Content

This half day training programme is practical and interactive. It will include:

- Analysis of 3 common scenarios
- Discussion of practical tips to minimise legal risks
- Exploration of effective personal strategies for managing complex and protracted workplace disputes

Learning Outcomes

At the conclusion of this programme, participants will:

- Understand some key legal issues regarding employment litigation such as legal professional privilege
- Develop strategies for managing employee litigation
- Consider and develop personal strategies to deal with protracted employment disputes
- Understand how to build emotional resilience.
